RUMIANTSOF MUSEUM.

The Rumiantsof Museum was founded by Count N. Rumiantsof and bequeathed to the public in 1828 by Chancellor Count A. Rumiantsof, and removed in 1861 from St. Petersburg to Moscow. It is magnificently housed, and aspires to rival the British Museum. It contains a library of 700,000 volumes; a Cabinet of Coins; the Daschkoff Museum of Ethnography; a Museum of Ecclesiastical Art; Mineralogical and Zoological Collections; a Sculpture Gallery and a Picture Gallery.

Nani.

The Nani Museum was collected chiefly by Antonio and Paolo Nani, about 1700, and later members of the same family.

There were Catalogues of the Oriental, the Egyptian, Greek, Latin and Italian MSS. in the Museum.

The bronzes were purchased by Count Portalès-Gorgier.

The marbles are now in the Musée Calvet, Avignon.

M. Cousin was librarian of the Library of the Arsenal, 1856 to 1870. After the siege of Paris he was entrusted with the reorganisation of the City Library, which had been burnt on 24th May, 1871. He then presented to the municipality his own private library relating to the history of Paris, consisting of 6000 volumes and 8000 prints, which was accepted and housed in the Hôtel Carnavalet. In 1883 a medal was struck in his honour.

The Musée Français after an existence of twenty years was closed by Ordinance of 18th December, 1816, which also established a School of the Fine Arts in the buildings.

The Government offered to restore to private families and churches the monuments which had been taken from them for the Museum, but many were not claimed. These were turned out into the open air to make way for the School, and so remained for many years. In 1824 they were transferred to the Louvre, and formed the Galerie d'Angoulême.

BAKER (JOSEPH BROGDEN).

The History of Scarborough. 8vo. London, 1882.

There is a description of the Museum building and of some of the principal objects exhibited, pp. 372-380.

See also Sir George Head, Home Tour, i., p. 278, London, 1840, 8vo; The Art Journal, xxiii. (1871), p. 81.

The form of the Scarborough Museum was suggested by William Smith (1769-1839), "the father of British geology," and he arranged its fine geological collection. In addition it contains a local collection of archaeological objects and some Celtic pottery.

111, 114, 116, and 108 plates.

In some copies a Dutch translation is substituted for the French. A copy was advertised by B. & J. White in 1795 (Catalogue, No. 37, p. 3, London, 1795), in which the plates were coloured by J. Fortuyn, at Leyden, soon after the publication of the work, from the specimens themselves in Seba's museum.

The plates were reprinted at Paris in 1827, and a new text was promised, but was not issued. The plates, says Cuvier, are excellent, but the text is of no authority whatever, being written without accuracy or judgment. Cuvier, The Animal Kingdom, by Griffith, vol. xvi. SMITH (JAMES), of Whitechapel, "the Working-man Antiquary."

Smith was a broker who made his living by buying bones found in city excavations. He next turned his attention to antiquities from the same source. Of these, although entirely illiterate, he became an excellent judge and never dealt in forgeries. While Mr. John Walker Baily lived Smith took all his finds to him, and these passed to the Guildhall Museum by the purchase of Mr. Baily's collection. For seven years after Mr. Baily's death he kept his finds, but in 1893 the Corporation of London purchased the whole, except some coins, for the same museum at the price of £400. He again began collecting, and sold his next collection to a private collector. He died of an accident met with in the course of his vocation as broker, and the gatherings he had then on hand were sold by auction at Sotheby's in December, 1902, realising something like £200.

The Stowe Sale Catalogue, priced and annotated: preceded by an account of the family of Buckingham and Chandos, and an illustrated historical notice of the mansion and gardens at Stowe. 4to. London, 1848.

The sale (40 days) realised £75,562.

Bram Hertz was a large purchaser.

"The Catalogue of this sale shows plainly how few regular collectors there were then in England, for most of the specimens went singly to this and that buyer, who were apparently mere ordinary amateurs rather than collectors properly so called." Michaelis, Ancient Marbles in Great Britain, p. 176.

There were also Catalogues of the Library, 24 days' sale; of Engraved British Portraits, 15 days' sale; and Supplements, including Illustrations to the Stowe copy of the private correspondence of Horace Walpole.

Papers relating to the purchase of the Stowe Collection of MSS. folio. London, 1883.

John Winthrop was grandson of the first Governor of Connecticut and great grandson of the first Governor of Massachusetts. Graduated at Havard in 1700. He presented more than 600 specimens—chiefly minerals—to the museum of the Royal Society, now in the British Museum.
Amongst other curious items in this Catalogue are:—"28 Clams, White. Their broth is most excellent in all intermitting fevers, consumptions, etc. These clams feed only on sand." "64 Fragments of shells dug up thirty feet deep in making a well three miles from the sea: great quantities of other shells were found in the same place. No water was present." "227 Regular Stones. Clay generated in form of horse shoes, from the bottom of Connecticut River."

A very slight work. A road book and account of the various countries: of no use to the scientific traveller.

It includes Scotland. This country produces gold and silver in abundance. The cattle in the Caledonian forest, the dogs and wolves are all of the fiercest character. There are fountains whose waters become stone, and many other marvels. Edinburgh resembles Prague. Glasgow has the greatest trade in that Kingdom, and has a celebrated University.

The book was attacked by Johann Georg Burckhard (1684-1764) writing under the pseudonym of Janus Gregorious Betulius, in Epistola ad Amicum, Hanoverae [1710], 8vo.

The edition of the De itinere of 1711 has a reply to this attack.

The author notices the principal museums and collections in the places he visited.

At Hamburg he saw the collections of D. Luders and B. N. Petraeus, and the one in the Public Library. In London he visited the Tower and the Royal Treasury, and the Museum in Gresham College (supra, vol. i., p. 131) and Sir Hans Sloane's collection. The English translator adds that there were large and curious collections in the hands of Mr. James Petiver, Mr. Dandridge, Mr. Dubois, Mr. Stonestreet, Mr. Buddle and Mr. Parry. He describes the Ashmolean Museum at Oxford, and refers to an entire Egyptian mummy lately presented by Sir Aaron Goodyear. He gives a long account of Dr. Ruysch of Amsterdam and his museum (supra, i., p. 116).

The unicorn's horn (Part I., c. xi.) is two cubits long, white and shining within, but is black without; it is not light nor hollow as other horns are, neither is it so plain and smooth, but is sharp and rough like a file, and at the end of it as sharp and piked as a sword, so that he easily runs his horn into anything.

In Part I., c. ix., p. 459 (ed. 1659) he deals with the Barnacle Goose (supra, i., p. 74) and gives as his authority Levinus Hulsius, De navigationibus Hollandicis, 1595, 1596, 1597, Norimb., 1598, 4to.

The author gives accounts of libraries, MSS., Roman antiquities and museums. The bibliographical notices are the fullest and most valuable. The book has neither index nor table of contents.

He mentions (i., p. 281) several private collections at Augsburg; the Coin Cabinet at Anspach (ii., p. 431); the Antiquarium and Natural History collections at Mannheim (iii., p. 174); Professor Wallreff's collection at Cologne (iii., p. 321); and various collections at Frankfort on the Main (iv., p. 202).

LAUREMBERG (WILHELM), Botanist and Physician.

Historica descriptio Aetitis seu Lapidis aquilae. 12mo. Rostochi, 1627.

This tiny volume, which is unpaged, is a perfect encyclopaedia of curious learning. Every statement is fortified by authority, and yet the Eagle-stone has been dropped from the pharmacopeia, and is not used by our detectives! It prevents abortion, assists labour and is apparently superior to chloroform and the forceps. As an amulet it wards off diseases. It protects against poison and heals warts: it it is κλεπτέλεγγος or a thief detector, and has fifty other virtues. The author describes all its varieties and the places where it is to be found. Of one kind found in Saxony he mentions that the price is 12 Lubeck shillings as the simplers were careless in collecting it. He incidentally refers to a curious statement of Matthiolus, that there is a certain plant in the Alps which has so great a power of attracting iron that if anyone were unwittingly to ride over it, the shoes of his horse would be affected.

NICOLAI (CHRISTOPH FRIEDRICH), Bookseller and Author, 1733-1811.

114, 148 Beschreibung einer Reise durch Deutschland und die Schweiz, im Jahre 1781. 8vo. 12 parts. Berlin & Stettin, 1783-95.

An interesting and minute account of the places visited with notes on costume and manners of the people, the police, industries, libraries, universities, schools, and learned men of the towns.

Nicolai was the son of a bookseller at Berlin, and followed the calling and accordingly pays considerable attention to bookselling. He has not much to say as regards Museums, but notes (i., p. 84) that there is a good collection of astronomical, mathematical and physical instruments at Coburg. In vol. iv., p. 501, he gives an account of the Imperial Treasury (Schatz-Kammer), and (at p. 845) of the Natural History and other collections at Vienna. At p. 851 of the same volume he has an interesting discussion on the censorship of the press. Vol. i., p. 99, he mentions that in Catholic countries interdicted books were kept in locked cases.

It is said that Nicolai was the original of the Proktophantasmist in Goethe's Faust. The line "Doch eine Reise nehm' ich immer mit," refers to the above work.

Beschreibung seiner Reisen durch Frankreich, die Niederlande, Holland, Deutschland und Italien. 8vo. 3 parts. Leipzig, 1783-84.

Contains accounts of numerous Cabinets of Natural History, public and private.

In 1776 the curator and preparationist of the Anatomical Museum at Paris in the Rue d'Estrapade was a woman, the well-known Mdlle. Biheron (i., p. 89 sqq.). (Scots Magazine, lxxv., 1813, p. 743.) He mentions the anatomical museum of Leyden (i., p. 527) and that of Amsterdam (i. p. 592), and has long accounts of the collections at Dresden (ii., p. 147 sqq.) and Vienna (ii., pp. 525, 576, 587).

The tobacco smoked in France, he complains (i., p. 87), is bad and coarse, and cost 5 sous an ounce. The subject seems to have interested him as in his Tour from Carlsruhe to Speyer in 1781 he has a good deal to say regarding the cultivation of tobacco. Bernoulli, infra, vol. v., p. 235.

The work caused much annoyance in England, and Bishop Sprat wrote Observations on it, London, 1665, 12mo, reprinted with the English translation of 1709. In France it was suppressed on account of the author's remarks regarding Count Ulefeld, who had married a natural daughter of the King of Denmark.

Sorbière does not take notice of museums or collections of any kind. At Oxford he says there "is a place of anatomy not worth seeing."

SPERLING (JOHANN), Professor and Rector of the University of Wittemberg, 1603-58.

Zoologia physica posth[uma]. 12mo. Lipsiae, 1661.

Edited by Georg Caspar Kirchmaier, who has appended to it his Disputationum zoologicarum De Basilisco . . . ac Araneâ Hexas. See supra, s.v. Kirchmaier. Some laudatory verses on these Disputations by J. E. Ostermann and Michael Wendeler are prefixed.

Sperling, Lib. III., c. vi., p. 186, gives some curious information regarding one-horned animals, and in particular the unicorn. He mentions (p. 190) that in Bohemia, Thuringia and Meissen horns are dug up and are of notable use in malignant fevers, plague and other violent ailments. They are sometimes sold for unicorn horns. Some are of opinion that the unicorn perished in the flood and that only their horns remain; but the Creator provided that no species should wholly perish. These fossil horns are mineral, not parts of a quadruped, and have not the hardness and solidity of that of the true unicorn.

The moral reflections on the several animals are curious. As the unicorn's horn is an excellent antidote against poison, so the knowledge and love of God is an excellent remedy against all vice. As it is dangerous for the snail to go from his house, so it is not good for women to go from their own houses.

Still the book is praised as the earliest compendium of zoology for students, and the basis of later works of others.

TOLLIUS (JACOBUS), Philologer and Chemist, 1626-96.

Epistolae itinerariae. 4to. Amstel., 1700.

Like other intelligent travellers Toll visited museums and this volume contains his notes on some collections. They are, however, rather superficial. The book was edited after his death from the author's notes—many of them in pencil—by his friend H. C. Hennin. It is dull reading and sadly wants lucidity, but contains some curious information.

Notes of a tour made with Viscount Ewelme.

Dr. Wright died at Kerse, in the parish of Falkirk, Stirlingshire. His "Account of an Irregular Tide in the River Forth," in The Philosophical Transactions, xlvi. (1749-50), p. 412, refers to his residence there.

In German. Berlin, 1793-94, 8vo, 2 vol.

He gives a very short account of the Grand Duke's Museum at Florence, and adds "no chamber for agriculture; no collection of machines relative to that first of arts; no mechanics of great talents or abilities, employed in improving, easing and simplifying the common tools used by the husbandman or inventing new ones, to add to his forces, and to lessen the expense of his efforts!"

ZAPF (GEORG WILHELM), Litterateur and Bibliographer, 1747-1810.

Reisen in einige Klöster Schwabens, durch den Schwarzwald und in die Schweiz im Jahr 1781. Worinn von Bibliotheken, Alterthümern, Geschichte und vom Zustand der Litteratur überhaupt Nachricht gegeben wird. 4to. Erlangen, 1786.

Mostly devoted to libraries and MSS. There are several notices of Cabinets of Coins and a few of Natural History collections, but of the latter the author remarks (p. 56) "bin auch kein Kenner derselben." "Das Archiv lag mir an Herzen" (p. 81). The book contains many interesting biographical notices.

Ueber meine literarische Reise in einige Klöstern Bayerns im Jahr 1780.

In Bernoulli (Johann), Sammlung kurzer Reisebeschreibungen, vol. viii., pp. 163-230.

Ueber meine literarische Reise in einen Theil von Bayern, Franken und Schwaben im Jahr 1782.

In Bernoulli, supra, vol. xi., pp. 195-282.

The same remarks apply to these two tours as to that of 1781. In vol. xi., p. 230, there is a longer description than the author usually gives of J. C. Schäfers ornithological collection at Ratisbon.
